

Drama is intended to be seen on a stage rather than read on a page.

K O P 0 • Ä Đ v & @ Đ

Stage directions: Used to inform the actor how to say the words in a play script, how to move or where to move to.

Soliloquy: An actor speaks the character's thoughts aloud when alone on stage to share them with the audience.

Dramatic irony: The audience is more aware of situations that will impact on the characters than the characters themselves.

Example: The audience is aware that Romeo and Juliet will die but they are not.

Lighting: Used to create mood and atmosphere on the stage as well as to establish the time and location of events.

Set design: Scenery or backdrops on the stage are used to indicate a time or location.

@ 0 p š • X

Props: Objects used by the actors to make the events clear.

Some topics are not right or wrong answer to a topic, only different opinions or different extents.

Some topics are not right or wrong answer to a topic, only different opinions or different extents. You agree or disagree without any doubt or room for questioning.

